

[illegible]

2207-2361-5272.

104-2986415-2349818

Because of these feelings she was afraid of setting herself up as a new authority for people to follow blindly...

There is no reason for secrecy but fear...fear of what? People who have the power to hurt you? Literally no one else has the power to hurt you. When others seem to hurt you, you use them in a way as weapons against yourself...

When man objectified energy he became afraid of it. You think of nuclear destruction as energy uncontrolled, rampant. That exteriorized concept is a symbol for mans own fear of his own inner energy. Nuclear reality is an example of what happens when the elements of the intellect do not understand their basis with nature, it sees itself apart from it – alienated...then the misunderstood intellect lashes out against nature in envy, trying to destroy a unity in which it feels it has not part...

All shrines are basically shrines to the authority of the self, regardless of the personifications or deifications involved. In certain terms each person is god, and each person is utterly anonymous, for god is completely personal and completely anonymous...

To the true physician, illness would be seen as physical symptoms of inner imbalance. The symptoms would be used as reference points while the other conditions of which they hinted were studied. The natural healing that would then be a true indication of the personality's growth, maturity, and overall health. Health does not apply to the body alone, not even the mind. That is, I am not speaking of mental ill health, meaning neurotic conditions. The healthy person is one who is balanced at any given moment of your time, as far as they're relationship with the psyche is concerned; with the world and its relationships...

It is only preconceived ideas of a specialized nature that prevent you from seeing that you are successes...

You spent your mental energy trying to these beliefs up...

You each had blind spots because your focuses were too specialized and limited...

I am going to try and help you enlarge your focus...

There are comprehensions, illuminations that cannot be verbalized...that result from solving problems that on the one hand seem to have nothing to do with the problems...

There are levels of understanding, again unpredictable, that are the creative results of certain courses you take...

She used her body as a symbol of the entire situation, the symptoms were a way to maintain privacy...

This is the result of a shifting of organization in his psyche...your lives are reorganizing themselves, finally, into a freer framework...

The change in beliefs is what seems to cause miracles...

Because she trusted him so much all he had to do was tell her she did not have arthritis. This alone removed some strongly negative body beliefs that had still remained despite her understanding of the reasons behind the symptoms...

The condition itself, then, and his attitude toward it, have complicated issues...

Some of this had to do with current mass beliefs, based on the idea of the mechanics of the body being more important than the thoughts behind the bodies working...

The symptoms then are intensified because of the conflict...

These have to do with when the individual emerged into space and time. They are simply various kinds of patterned behavior, swirls of interactions as the soul meets space and time...

You do choose a condition which could be experienced and then conquered...

Your daily remarks constantly speak of financial lack...

You constantly talk about your lacks. You are blind to your gains but you do not emphasize them...

Now that the reasons behind the condition is understood, they are no longer strong enough to cause such a condition...

She would never dare express her feelings to you because she felt you would not understand them. ..

The symptoms operated to control her full expression...

Each muscle obviously affects others...

There are correlations still to be understood between the dream messages and physical recovery however...

If you still believe that you must go to the dentist, than you better...

He is working intimately with subjective and objective experience, correlating dream events and physical life...

This will allow you to give from to the formless, or rather – to realities who inner forms are not usually fully perceived...

The physical events this evening came directly from an inner event...the physical results are only beginning to show themselves...

There are still more correlations the inward and outward sequence of events...

The physical setup is symbolically important, for it represents your intent...

To one extent or another in your society you are taught not to trust yourself. There are various schools and religions that try, in distorted terms, to express the self's validity, but the distortions have smothered the basic validity of the teachings...

The belief prevented him from following through, so the symptoms became a symbol, because he still did not trust himself sufficiently...

You form your private and joint realities...

You haven't really focus upon solving the problem, but you have focused upon the problem – there is a vast difference

The exterior condition can be remedied, it is only necessary that he believe it...
She is now finally ready to work through the issues. As given, those involve the cultural training and religious indoctrinations...finally challenging the old beliefs...

You are meant to examine those beliefs...

This has nothing to do with so called psychic phenomena, but the natural growth and development of a personality whenever it tries to go beyond its space time context, and takes a challenge of such a nature...

Once a new framework or reality is sensed, then the old framework is seen as limiting, and discarded...

They represented parts of his own psyche, still, at that level of consciousness, not having quite assimilated the greater knowledge or experience...

This was meant to get him to trust the inner world of experience...

Your will is your intent. The self makes deductions according to your beliefs about reality...you all have ways of dealing with challenges...

Your will operates according to your beliefs about reality, and is altered if those beliefs change...

Many people never learn to apply the power of their will at all...

The altered directive is all that's necessary. The rest will unconsciously follow...

This understanding is much more important than a past cause...

The body is completely reorienting itself according to his new beliefs...

His own inner experiences are structuring the necessary physical changes. The body at each instant accurately reflects the inner state, but in your terms with some necessary time lag...

The soul in the body represents the corporeal meeting of the physical and the nonphysical selves...

I am not speaking of transforming the world through great dogmas, but of concepts that put people in touch with their own reality...

Your own creativity expands in ways that have nothing to do with time...

In order to fear the opinions of others, you have to value them above your own...

When you are not challenging the worlds concepts there is hardly a problem...

The ones who set out know there are some risks. But they also know that intuitively they possess the ability to conquer such barriers

There are literally no authorities...only people...

People do their own things, and point to others as authorities to take responsibility for them...

The economy itself is a reflection of the people's concepts, their way of life, and it is not working...

Those who looked entirely to money and position are forced, and will be to question their beliefs...

Those who relied upon limited concepts will be bound to them until they learn to leap beyond...

I can foresee probabilities, but you make your own reality, and I will not take that responsibility...

She is now trying to encounter her challenges without relying upon old structures of belief...

Don't blame anyone else for not giving you what you wanted, if you really wanted it, you would have had it yesterday...

I will lead you to insights and solutions that can only be yours alone...

My purpose is not to solve your problems for you, but to put you in touch with your own power...

Your problems are caused by your own doubts. These doubts arise because you have been out of touch with the validity of your own existence...

Such a condition will result according to your beliefs...

Whatever method you use to cure an illness, they are effective only to the extent that they convince the patient of his or her own power to overcome the condition...

The healer is usually equipped with their own beliefs, to which the patient is highly suggestible, because this is the area of conflict...

The doctor is usually as obsessed with disease as his patient, though from a different viewpoint...

The man or woman obsessively concerned with health is also obsessed with disease...

There is basically nothing wrong with the muscles or the joints. They will respond to this understanding. They know they can move...

He set up a body of beliefs that he once considered valid, and to change that requires some conscious effort. It requires patience, and loving understanding on both your parts...

When you concentrate upon limitations and distractions they multiply...

Some of your private and joint problems spring from cultural beliefs that you are intellectually aware of, but not emotionally free from...

Your strengths reinforce each other, but so do your misunderstandings...

While you believe there is, however, then you are faced with it...

Only in creative play does great "work" emerge. Only from exuberant impracticality do any so-called practical inventions come...

It rises above all impracticality into those greater realms of emotional and spiritual abundance that gives birth to all worlds...

Each problem set is solved, for yourself, and the solutions become part of racial knowledge...

This involved several kinds of perception and the willingness to accept a greater mobility of consciousness...

Your concepts may limit your conscious experience of the psyche's vast activity, but the psyche does not limit its experience...

The focus personality was able to sense its own greater extensions...

While symptoms of any kind serve a purpose they are considered legitimate, the psyche will not remove them until the intensity of desire for freedom rises high enough to meet those purposes in other ways...

Your reality is at every point again, a perfect replica of your inner wishes and expectations...

Imagined fears, projected into the future, put the body in a state of stress unknown to the animal...

This will require altering patterns of beliefs and thoughts that are deeply ingrained...

Each personality takes on certain challenges and deals with them in its own order...

In your society money is like a weapon that you need to protect yourself...

I tell you now that time and money have nothing in common at all, and they have less in common with the nature of creativity...

There is nothing wrong with the kidneys, but with the suppression of impulse...

Symptoms are organized so that specific purposes are met...

With this understanding of how his body works the symptoms are no longer necessary...

Obviously the physical world itself attains its organization through a staggering cooperation. Reality agrees with you. You physically mold your experience with your beliefs about it...

The exterior improvements are the result of inner body workings, and they represent the growth of inner confidence...

The body is flexible and health is a natural result of alterations of consciousness – a change of focus that literally brings about new experience...

You literally will yourselves alive. That will to be triggers all bodily activity, which then operates automatically, with the same power from which the self itself emerged...

You see about you others dealing with life's challenges, following the old beliefs. They must see that those beliefs do not work for themselves...

When will is divided the structure is divided...

Inner information must be translated into physical terms...

Your ideas of time however are detrimental; they were formed in line with old beliefs...

To whatever extent you place demands upon life – to that extent you will cut down on your options and experience difficulties. Life does not perform on demand...

To the extent that you enjoy the quality of life itself, you do not need to place demands upon it, for its abundance shows in profusion...

The body is not an assumed façade, but the physical materialization in your world of your inner being...

It is not realistic to expect a life of unending, exuberant health, with no momentary lapses of any kind...

No one constant emotional state is meant to prevail...

Those who constantly think negative thoughts, gradually alter the chemical balances within the body. You cannot separate health from philosophy. Each individual has his or her own idea of reality...

He just knew that the conventional medical framework was not the answer to human ills...

The body does not follow your logical thoughts however...

The cry of symptoms however, is meant to bring about a new condition, to trigger healing aspects, so drugs can often impede the healing process...

The body is a self-healing mechanism...

The dream experiences reflect the assimilation of conscious and unconscious knowledge, and a new growing unity...

You might say that perceivable events are composed of a conglomeration of certain levels of consciousness tuned in to form an event, say, instead of an object...

Events are formed in response to your own conscious intents...

Events are formed by various levels of consciousness intersecting...

You were able to do something few people can: leap intuitively and mentally above your own period and discard the shortsighted religious and scientific beliefs of your fellow humans...

You learned to express love through worry or concern...

Your stomach problem is basically the result of your feelings about what you consider to be a lack of communication, a blocking of your natural flow of love...

The sinus inhaler was a crutch. When he became nervous he didn't breathe properly...

When man developed rational thought...the importance of symbols was minimized, and intuitive to some extent went out of style...

Drugs open the door to the experience of interior events, when the deeper symbolism of self begins to surface, but this form alienates many people because they are afraid of leaving the structured language of prose behind...

Though the fanatic may make much noise in the world, he is actually isolated from all the worlds' ideas except his own. Anything else is seen as a threat. He does not allow the development of his concepts or beliefs. They stop at one particular point – and at that point he wages battle against reality...

[illegible]

I am in my way rather pragmatic about the world...

If you worry about probable future threats, not only do you lose safety, but you also project threat into the future...

Now, for all the fanatics displays of energy, he feels basically powerless...

These are a tiny band of alienated, frightened people who strike out against anything they cannot understand. They see threats everywhere...

Fears should be discussed, but not dwelt upon, for unrealistic fears disappear in the light of realistic discussion...

Your experience confirms your beliefs...

The bifocals were resisted. The eye muscles were trying to work. The bifocals were trying to do the work for the eyes...

It is your ambiguity and feelings of distrust that cut improvements short...and symptoms to linger...

Probabilities are pulled in not by mere whim, but through desire and intent...

Constantly applied tension leads to any and all physical problems...

It is dangerous to use generalities...

These appear in your experience as a result of misunderstandings because of ingrained beliefs about body behavior and a lack of confidence...

Each entity is different from every other and seeks different types of intents and focuses...

The entity is the part of the self that cannot fit into one life alone...

Most people could not handle the knowledge of future lives in the present...

The past is not only still alive, but it constantly gives forth multitudinous futures, as does your present...

Now: in certain terms, past present and future are all compressed in any given moment of your experience...

The events that you as happening now are simply specific and objective, but the most minute element in any given moments experience is also symbolic of other events and other times...

They are not creatures to be feared or run from. they do not have guns. The larger threat was in his mind...

In the terms in which you understand the world, there is a god. Obviously I am not speaking of a personification of a super person. For that matter, in the terms of your language and intellectual concepts, you will probably take it for granted that you cannot understand the nature of such a god...

Taking it for granted, however, the body is an entire organism, and in many cases, the treatment of the individual symptoms masks the body's greater integrity...

All materialist are still presented nightly with dreams in which they are swayed by events that have no basis in the world of facts...

Most of the time you are not honest with yourself. You say yes when you mean no...

The body changes constantly, there are rhythms of the soul...

People shed old beliefs as snakes shed skins...

These are a tiny band of alienated, frightened people who strike out against anything they cannot understand. They see threats everywhere...

You are taught that to be practical is to expect the worst...

I tell you now that time and money have nothing in common at all, and they have less in common with the nature of creativity...

Only in creative play does great "work" emerge. Only from exuberant impracticality do any so-called practical inventions come...

It rises above all impracticality into those greater realms of emotional and spiritual abundance that gives birth to all worlds...

Whatever method you use to cure an illness, they are effective only to the extent that they convince the patient of his or her own power to overcome the condition...

My purpose is not to solve your problems for you, but to put you in touch with your own power...

Those who looked entirely to money and position are forced, and will be to question their beliefs...

Those who relied upon limited concepts will be bound to them until they learn to leap beyond...

I can foresee probabilities, but you make your own reality, and I will not take that responsibility...

People do their own things, and point to others as authorities to take responsibility for them...

The economy itself is a reflection of the people's concepts, their way of life, and it is not working...

You haven't really focused upon solving the problem, but you have focused upon the problem -- there is a vast difference

To one extent or another in your society you are taught not to trust yourself. There are various schools and religions that try, in distorted terms, to express the self's validity, but the distortions have smothered the basic validity of the teachings...

Because the inner fears were not recognized, no efforts were made to face them, challenge them. Denying the fears prevented him from further developing abilities and strengths that could have conquered them...

It is difficult sometimes to untangle beliefs because you do not get ahold of the proper strands...

All materialist are still presented nightly with dreams in which they are swayed by events that have no basis in the world of facts...

Suggestion, so-called, is little understood. The word perhaps is a poor one. Yet to a certain extent your world runs by suggestion. Suggestion is simply an impetus to act in a given direction...

Experience is largely preprogrammed in that respect, you know where you belong...few people stray from those frameworks...

Suggestion, so-called, is little understood. The word perhaps is a poor one. Yet to a certain extent your world runs by suggestion. Suggestion is simply an impetus to act in a given direction...

Experience is largely preprogrammed in that respect, you know where you belong...few people stray from those frameworks...

Because of your natures you have strayed from your framework...you are seeking answers to the most difficult problems of life and death alike...

You know that no wars are holy...only regrettable...

Sometimes I am at a loss for words...for often explanations make things sound more difficult than they are..

The more you enjoy life, and your daily moments, the less difficulty you will have in any area, for your thoughts will become naturally pleasant, and naturally attract good to you...

You go on faith there will be a tomorrow, you operate on faith constantly...

It is possible to have a sudden and complete healing...desire, faith and belief are keys...

The firewalker utterly believes in his ability. He does not worry that he will be burned. He has learned to focus his faith in a highly specialized fashion...he ignores the evidence of his senses...the area taken up by the fire becomes dimensionally neutral...the firewalker plays a different game...with different rules...

The timing of such events are outside your time, but the results appear within it...

The things you desire will freely flow to you in life...if you don't impede them through contradictory beliefs...

When you are thinking in terms of cause and effect you cannot glimpse that greater meaning. It is beyond all questions of beginnings and endings, for out of its framework spring such concepts and realities...

To some extent you hypnotize yourself into your view of reality...

No one accepts suggestion against their will, but few people know their will...

The body is a mental expression, but thoughts are physically expressed...

Black magic and white magic, both stress the importance of imagery and desire...

You cannot be different than you are...

Diseases are simply groups of symptoms that you have categorized in certain orders to begin with...

Guilt can be used to manipulate people, it is a fine tool in the hands of government, religion, science, or any organization that wants to retain power...

God, the source was put outside of nature, finally at last to remote, and the story itself became frayed at the edges as man tried to tie intuitive truths to objective facts...

This kind of consciousness knows itself, or tries to know itself, only in relationship to others or exterior conditions...and avoids introspection...

This does not mean that medical help is always detrimental at all...for the intents of the individual always apply...

With that loss of identification storms for the first time became truly threatening, capricious, for man could not intellectually understand the intimate yet vast connections that the intuitions and emotions had once comprehended...and this is when man began to personify the elements of nature...

Do not label yourselves, for then you often try to live up to those labels, and they can be highly limiting...

I dare not to trespass any further upon your cherished beliefs...

Fear turns into severe anxiety, when they are not identified or understood...the fears themselves caused blocks that prevented assimilation of the knowledge later...

There is nothing wrong with fears. Unidentified fears are something else...

Truly creative work is timeless...

Because of their relative inadequacies they then overcompensate...seeking for an ideal that in certain terms can only be held for so long...

Your environment is a symbol of your inner life and beliefs...there is a constant give and take between the two...

Love expressed through touch, has a reviving effect upon the body and the mind...

The sun will shine upon you whether or not you think you had a good day or a bad day...

The physical body runs itself spontaneously, and yet with an inner automatic discipline and order that is indeed almost impossible for you to understand...

The vast majority of intellectual deductions are based upon unconscious, intuitive realizations, and the edifices built by the intuitions have a dazzling framework of high intellectual content and reason, so brilliant that the mind itself cannot follow...

When you make love, you are involved with a spontaneity and discipline, again, that literally cannot be consciously ascertained...

True trust, however, is your greatest protection, and you cannot be betrayed, for you will not attract deceivers...

You are familiar with the idea that matter is composed of a conglomeration of particles that reach infinitely beneath the physical stuff of the world...

You perceive events completely at surface level only...

Matter seems composed of mosaics of particles, interacting in electromagnetic fields, but the mosaics of consciousness interrelate in ways almost impossible to verbally describe...

The so-called laws of cause and effect operate at a certain level of consciousness...

The mediums insights are automatically translated into stylized versions that will be understood by those for whom he reads...but they come from a place from where the intellect can go no further...

[illegible]

People may question the precepts, but generally speaking they live and work within organizational frameworks, each one ruled by various assumptions or suggestions...

When you do not trust your inclinations then you must indeed make rules to follow instead...

The practical experience of reality is formed through the suggestive psychological idea-shapes that appear in the guise of theories, dogmas, and assumptions...

The theory of evolution represents a magnetic organizing suggestive hypothesis...

It seemed the world had an outside only, and was empty inside. All action had to occur within an arena where competition ruled. Life was not trusted. There was no purpose in nature except mechanical reproduction. The individual had no importance...

I assume by that question, you mean, “why does man not understand how his heart works?”

I cannot explain this at all adequately. All I hope to do is to show you the assumptions behind your questions. And that is important.

In that life you had no belief in conventional gods, yet you were supposed to be conquering lands in their name...

No condition is stable, but ever changing...

[illegible]

I am at a loss for words, for often explanations make things sound more complicated than they are...

Negative beliefs have to be inserted there with great repetitiveness before you meet their physical results...

Physical events are formed outside of your existence, where all necessary computations are done in terms of probabilities, so that physical events then mesh properly in space and time...

The field of probabilities constantly changes...

Your ideas of the history of your species, then, is a largely distorted version of the last chapter...
 55

Newspapers also act in suggestive fashion, further programing your expectations...

No one accepts suggestion against their will, but few people know their will...

The art stands for more than the person. In that it expresses dimensions of imagination or inspiration that are heroic, and often by nature it speaks of capacities that cannot be fully expressed except through art...

The subconscious is of course a hypothetical term that stands for the portions of the self at which the normal consciousness and the source self meet...

You must understand that basically – basically – both body and mind are mental...one is the materialization of the other...

The subconscious does not exist, of course, “it” is a highly personalized portion of the self, uniquely tuned...

You cannot exactly say that each object is a symbol of a belief that specifically, and yet any alterations that you willfully make in your behavior with the objects of your intimate environment represent alterations of beliefs...there is a constant give and take between the two...when you change the furniture in a room around you are altering beliefs in an observable way...

The physical body runs itself spontaneously, and yet with an inner automatic discipline and order that is indeed almost impossible for you to understand...

Your work is the interpretation of reality through your own experience...

Your impulses are signals that if followed will automatically lead to the greatest fulfillment and development...

Your time concepts are particularly limiting, because they lead you into a particular focus in which you concentrate upon impediments to your desire...

Any soreness is caused by the body's new activity...

You concentrate upon the poorest aspects of physical existence and therefore continue to perceive it...

You can only react to the world as you encounter it through specific experiences, you cannot escape it, for it will come to your door...

In a way the mystic's goals are eternal – that is, they involve comprehensions sought for whose validity is in important ways independent of historical time, even though the comprehensions may be couched in certain frameworks...

What you do is not as important as your attitudes toward your decisions...fears are understandable. But it is not natural to be ruled by your fears...

Only when you doubt your impulses do difficulties arise...

The body utilizes both energy and chemicals differently at night...

You perceive events in the same fashion, almost surface-wise...

There are particles that move faster than light...

Why the fuck do almost all movies and video games involve fighting or killing? Do they seriously know of anything else in this existence?

Both science and religion seek “truth,” but a literal interpretation of physical reality is as limiting as the literal interpretation of the Bible...

So why my fascination with death? During such attacks of desolation, I felt too fastidious for life, even outrages by its conditions, drawn toward a life of solitary contemplation – yet such contemplation I reasoned, would only deepen my distress...

For surely, I reasoned, we were dead for longer than we lived, and how could life’s brief iridescent light shed any real illumination into that vast darkness that surrounded life on all sides?

It was only after death that I understood life’s full achievement; appreciated the fine focus of consciousness tuned so precisely and triumphantly to one place and time...

So Protestantism became schizophrenic; its bleaker side expressed in disguised form through Freud’s theories, its drive for salvation allied with democracy’s conventional churches...

Any religion is a devotional umbrella of beliefs, attitudes, and habits, collected from many sources that together form a protective and thematic framework...

In whatever erroneous a fashion, however, religion did attempt to categorize inner realities...

There is no reason why the existence of the soul cannot be a scientific hypothesis, but science itself must learn how ridiculous it is for the scientists to ignore his own nature – his emotional and subjective reality...

Psychology acted as if Einstein’s concepts had no relation to the greater environment in which each person has his being...

I do know from experience that we move through the mind field as we move through the physical one and that at one point we move out of the range of regular accepted physical objectivity...

The dreams of the living make an equally imperfect connection with space-time, for example, going off at a vertical angle, though in a gentler slope...

Dream images therefore impress space-time too lightly for your waking neurological perception...

We are born instinctively knowing how to create matter, as instinctively we know how to breathe...

I do not mean to over romanticize, yet overromanticization is a far lesser error than an over objectification that dismisses life’s sentiment quality as beside the point, and justifies cruelty to animals by citing distorted evolutionary concepts...

The truth seeker must steadfastly stand apart from science and religion alike...

Living or dead, however, existence takes place initially in mental realms rather than physical ones...and it implies states of mind first of all...

If the persons mind is given to philosophy, if they are searching for what comes before and what comes after; there is no recourse but to stand somewhat apart of the times...

There is no recourse but to refuse that concentration upon daily details that others find so fascinating...

The answers must come from another level that gives meaning to life's daily context, so the questioner treads a careful line attending to life and not attending at the same time...involved and not involved...

There are those who delve into interrelationships instead, stressing the multitudinous emotional interactions possible, weaving these into various kinds of existence and forming multidimensional psychological connections with others...

Now and then I wander down unofficial paths that lead to unexplored psychological lands that just might correlate with other realities than the one we know...

The feelings and experiences of each person continues after death...

Each persons experience...while still remaining personally theirs becomes part of a psychic bank, belonging to the species as a whole...

The theory of reincarnation is an attempt to see the basic, inviolate, yet many faceted self in terms that can be understood, and that are in keeping with popular concepts of time...

Consciousness forms particles of identities, that can be in more than one place at a time...they can also operate in wavelike fashion, flowing through other such particles...they can form endless infinite combinations, forming psychological gestalts...these represent the unconscious elements of the psyche, while become “particleized” in physical existence...

You are unaware of the molecular transformations involved in maintaining your body as long as the overall pattern remains familiar and relatively intact...

My identity includes the identity of many others. Each of them operates independently. In those terms, I am a wave formation. Each person operates partially as a particle, and partially as a wave...

The individual psyche can reach beyond itself into other psychic and other psychological realities...

Often we only project our own limited ideas about identity into the afterlife....

But as adults, were so worried about defending our own identities, so jealous for their boundaries, that we run away at the first glimpse of a feeling or thought that we can't categorize; any idea we consider uncharacteristic...we cut our own psychological reality down to size...

We may discover that dreams are more practical than fact in the long run...

No psychologies can prepare the individual for the transitions that occur as the soul moves into realms for which no earthly education can prepare it...

Freed by death from the conventional frameworks of thought and belief that surrounded me, I have gained in death insights and comprehensions of the greatest consequence...

Psychology accepts the importance of emotions only so that they can be intellectually categorized and laid away in lifeless compartments, isolated from the faculties of the reasoning mind...

Religions attempts to avoid any critical examination that might reveal flaws in emotional diamonds that are displayed, but never used...

Perhaps the scientist, innocent of religions darker superstitions, could discern truth and discover even in the most amateur of séances that one indisputable proof that would release man from this ancient fear of death and annihilation...

There seemed no scientific proof for survival of the dead. Even indisputable instances of apparitions of the departed could be explained in other ways-as perceptive errors, hallucinations...

The emotions truth may respond to an inner objective reality that has its own rules and values that are not mysterious or hidden, but perceivable if you use the proper measuring tool...

The fictional events of the novel are symbolic statements about inner emotional realities that have a deeper validity. There is a definite correspondence between such imaginative events and the objective world...

The dramas presented by the séance must have been emotional frenzies, creative fabrications and subconscious dramatizations...these stood for inner realities...they symbolized inner facts and hold the same correspondence to events after death as conventional novels or plays did in daily life...

But the afterlife presents us with no yardstick with which to measure the inner facts or such psychological events...

A good hypnotist automatically hypnotizes himself before he begins to work his suggestions upon the mind of another – a fact not in the least understood then or now...

The scientist would never admit paranormal events...the more he became fascinated by the emotional elements under investigation, the greater his risks of losing his psychic virginity...

Then I was able to ride emotions power to the highest states of creativity...forming a synthesis between the intellect and the emotions that is the natural state of man's psyche and do allow it to continue its existence after death...

In life the dynamics of creativity are hidden from us in a way that logical thought processes are not...

In front of such a great display of beauty the overall personality is altered: faith replaces doubt, vibrant health retunes the body, intellectual faculties before drained by anxiety are quickened...

Was life like some unspeakable complicated problem in emotional mathematics, each soul given one, and then sent back into the realms of nonbeing where concentration was expanded in some inexplicable way? To what point?

Dream effects are undeniable, and often lead to definite behavior changes...

For surely precognitive dreams of disasters must lead to feelings helplessness and confusion...

It was only after death that I understood life's full achievement; appreciated the fine focus of consciousness tuned so precisely and triumphantly to one place and time...

...By providing soaring concepts and emotions that freed me momentarily from my own habitual patterns of sentiment and thought...

The inner structures of such intuitive securities however strongly felt, seemed to dissolve to whatever extent they were tampered with intellectually...

The term "God" is the simplest one to use here, though it is interchangeable with many others, all referring to a point in our thinking where comprehension stops: we can no longer even mentally verbalize what we feel. The word then suggests that source out of which intellect and intuition spring, and in which they are so invisibly, securely, and intimately couched that they and their source are separate and united at once...

These creative abilities, in their finest performances, defy space and time, lift man out of the limited context of intellect or emotion alone, and forge both into a higher faculty in which experience is more evidential than any demonstrable fact; and in which facts themselves are seen to be like wobbly weeds stuck only momentarily in ever shifting sands on the shores of eternity...

This perfect ideal finally disintegrated into a futile search for a dreary, stereotyped mental and physical perfection whose modeled edges blurred the vitality of any individual variances...

Parapsychology was birthed to include all of those experiences that did not fit into the original cramped tenants adopted as the sum of man's psychological reality...

Freud perceived and experienced the creative force as primarily sexual in nature...

The inner life of the American individual became standardized, stripped of religions old rich symbolisms, yet given no new ones. Freud translated religions daemons into the instinctive impulses, retaining these while throwing aside the grander symbols of a heroic god...

Freud's psychology standardized and explained the feelings of men and women in a way that left them no individual interpretations of their own that mattered...and individual feeling existed on a standardized basis...

Creativity became suspect. Intuitional insights were then assigned to hysterical behavior. Devotion to contemplation or solitary thought became suspect most of all; and those who did not channel their creative drives toward the democratic society's safe goals felt that society's wrath...

The individual no longer needed a priest to interpret God's words or the Bible, but instead required an interpreter to understand the unconscious aspects of his own psychological identity – here is where he lost authority...

Parapsychology tried to address the elements of the soul that religion refused to examine...

Protestantism was based upon man's right to interpret truth for himself, on an individual basis, directly challenging the authority of the roman catholic church as the only agency capable of such discrimination; and upon an attempt to put the individual In a one-to-one with God and the universe...

Here the penis replaced the cross...

Religion had a good case of social embarrassment and spiritual constipation...

Any religion is a devotional umbrella of beliefs, attitudes, and habits, collected from many sources that together form a protective and thematic framework...

Here religion could have dropped its ancient insistence upon blind faith unsupported by any kind of reason, even accept psychology as an invitation to explore the nature of man with an open mind...

Fear of god no longer offered any protection...

There was no hope: god was abandoned, man had outgrown him. He was at best a symbol of the only too fallible human father...

MM

At death you face the events of your life...there is nothing on earth to compare with the depth, breadth, complexity, or intensity of such a psychological multievent...

After physical death the division between living and nonliving has little meaning...there are gradations of consciousness...

Obsessive behaviors are repressed prime interests...

The answers must come from another level that gives meaning to life's daily context, attending to life and not attending to life at the same time...

For facts hide the soul...

The thoughts of the living and the dead flow through each other...

After death, earth life is such a small arena of activity that we wonder how it can contain such depths and dimensions of action and meaning...

Memories of other lives pile up in my mind like books still to be read though already purchased...

william james 4

The mind itself is a vast threshold, reaching into infinite depths of experience...

william james 4

I use my mind to go where I want to, and the rest of my body follows soon after...

A philosopher who avoids dealing with good and evil is no philosopher at all...

It is pointless to try and get an introvert to extrovert...

[illegible]

That vaster reality does not simply spring into being at death. It is the medium in which life happens: living momentarily supersedes it, even while subsisting in its source...

Yet the thoughts scientists hold about physical reality are themselves nonphysical...even to the scientist his thoughts must appear transparent and lacking all of those qualities of solidarity that otherwise exist in the phenomenal world...

If the scientist is honest with himself he recognizes how subtly yet surely these dream images affect his waking life...

Physical creature or not, man is everywhere in his subjective experience reminded of a nonphysical reality that ever impinges into the most intimate portions of his physically oriented life...

Yet all objects cannot honestly be considered without an equal investigation into the nonphysical properties of mind that give the objects their appearance of solidity...

So far, science had only examined results. By its insistence upon the priority and superiority of matters dominance, it ties its own hands. The very focus of its beliefs leads it toward an endless categorizing in which it follows minute particles into a deeper invisibility. The hypothetical discovery of each new minuscule particle exerts an ever-deepening hypnotic effect, leading the scientist down a road that is self-defeating if he hopes to delve into those phenomena that exist beneath the world's operating reality...

In whatever erroneous a fashion, however, religion did attempt to categorize inner realities...

Whether the universe is infinitely expanding or contracting is equally absurd if the greater issue of truth is to be involved...

The very definitions of truth are at fault...

Science and psychology owe their birth to religions failure in conducting that search for truth...they are split offs from religion, yet to a large extent converged...

Scientist however know that time is relative, and if this is fact, than is the fact of consecutive time false? If false, than no day is Wednesday, whether the statement is operationally true or not...no matter how far you go with this kind of truth finding...you will ultimately be led to a point where one fact contradicts another, or another framework of facts, or where you simply run into ignorance – a point of no answers...

I would like to briefly compare the universe to a model of a multidimensional work of art, rather than say to a mechanical machine whose components, examined will inevitably yield an understanding of its parts and overall purpose...

Science sees murder and conflict in nature instead of the inner balances worked out by the various species themselves...

They were able to leapfrog their own apparent death in a series of biological computations that completely escape us...

A true study of nature would be by projecting your consciousness into it, not by examining it from the outside...

The very treatment of the body as if it were a machine effectively separates the individual from his own body...

Disease seems to happen for no reason...

No pill will cure the souls melancholy...

To whatever extent the medical profession separates man from identification with and responsibility for his body, it deepens that melancholy, and the patient sinks down into philosophical chasms in which all hope seems lost...

With the treatment of the body as if it were a machine, man lost his sense of identification with his nature and his sense of having any control over his own health...

There seemed to be malignant viruses everywhere that could rise up at any time and attack the system, and a consciousness that followed the unknown, capricious dictates of a repressed subconscious run amok...

No one questions those who remain healthy...

x-rays allowed the doctor to see inside the man's body, something the patient could not do, feeling became less important...

man can put his consciousness together in numberless ways, and therefore perceive himself and his world in different fashions...

the individual blades of grass become almost invisible in the larger perceptive framework...

man does not know where his ideas come from...

consciousness is never stationary. The quicksilver nature of your own thoughts should make this instantly apparent...

the universe is a bank of physical potentials; not an already rigid objective field but more of a gelatinous propensity toward a number of probable shapes...

concentrating upon one subject alone for only a few moments shows the tension that results as you try to leash or confine your thoughts...

all hypothetical points of the universe are conscious at mind level...

we move through the mind field as we move through the physical one, and that, at one point, we move out of the range of regular accepted physical objectivity...

the dead are out of tune with the station shown on your screen of reality. They do now coincide with your space-time coordinates, but go off vertically, so to speak, at the point of death, forming angles of experience in some ways adjacent to yours, but no longer connecting...

the dead experience events that appear physical to them...but do not appear in your continuum or are not imprinted there...

the infant learns to focus its awareness through the nervous system, pinpointing events in space and time. These are initially inner events, however, that affect the objective field...

the dead cannot physically intrude again without another birth into that system...

those times and places require the physical nervous system for objective placement through projection outward onto that exterior medium...

the dreams of the living make an equally imperfect connection with space-time, also going off at a verticle angle, so that the mental images only cause ripples in space-time...

the angle of dream events is "off", they hit the space-time continuum in a slantwise fashion...

you think the objective field is separate, but matter is a manifestation of mind...

dream images impress space-time too lightly for your waking neurological perception...

- certain dream images "take" better than others fitting within probability boundaries more easily and possessing many of the prerequisite conditions necessary for a fully materialized object or experienced event...

certain "knots" of energy are interpreted as objects or events...

events are reflections of inner correlates of the structure of the cells and animate matters...

the objective field, then, is a medium with the propensity for leaning toward objectivity; it accepts mental stimuli which imprint it...

the intensity of emotions, desires, and intents everywhere rules, and is the primary consideration in the stiffening of probabilities into perceived events...

the dead constantly project their own mental images onto the physical objective field, but they do not "take"...they are deflected as say a dream...

the dead's experience is off on a tangent, so the relationship to this world and their focus is at a different angle that does not allow direct intersection with earths field of objectivity...

they dead survive death, but they are not as they were in the same way that an adult is no longer a child...

the true nature of our identity cannot squeeze into the coordinates of recognized space-time...

a dead personality would have to impress a mind and nervous system of a particular individual with a picture of their image, and rely upon that living persons intent and desire to project the image outward clearly enough so that the person would perceive it as an apparition...

by the time the individual has finished school in the system in the area of his specialty, he is already comprised and prejudiced in favor of his disciplines accumulated body of facts...

since nature's true significance could not be proven, since aesthetics cannot be diagrammed, science settled upon studying the details, the particulars, and ended up with a very limited investigation of nature...

william james 3

science lost sight of the “fact” that some knowledge forever escapes facts categories, existing in a different order entirely, one just as valid and just as demonstrable, but in a kind of emotional or psychological equation upon which the validity of facts themselves must ultimately ride...

facts have little meaning without the encounter...

that direct encounter happens when the personality intersects with something not itself through sense data that the personality and the something-else produce creatively together...

knowledge can use facts but not be bound by them...

facts can set up barriers between us and our own experience by programming us to perceive in the light of known facts...

[illegible]

dr. tien-sheng hsu/ William james 5

cancer as a turning point for a new life illness reflects an issue in life we have not faced...

universal concept to the sun...

cancer is a physical manifestation of the result of a psychic energy blockage and distortion...

cancer is a signal of the desire for improvement in the quality of life and is an impetus for change...

cancer is a sign showing that the current lifestyle does not match the desires of the individual...

woman should not be considered attachments to men...

when a woman believes she needs a man to be complete, a feeling of desolation is brought about, this desolation can manifest itself as cancer...

a woman has to enjoy sex...

a woman has to have a life outside of her family and continue to fulfill her own desires...

[illegible] how can a spirit have vision when disconnected from the organs of sight?

